CONTENTS

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction xi

1. Languages, Methods, Objects 3

The Linguistic Unity of the Vienna Circle 6

The Question of the Unity of the Object Domain of the Sciences in Carnap's Work 12

Traditional Methodological Unities 20

Hacking's Styles of Scientific Reasoning 23

Ontological Enrichment and "Foliated Pluralism" 30

2. Intertheoretic Relations and Their Metaphysical Import 35

Metaphysical Foundations of Antireductionist Theses 36

From the Failure of Reductionism to the Disorder of Things: A Problematic Inference 53

Against Cartwright's Nomological Metaphysical Pluralism 58

Ontological Order and Nomological Disorder in the Structuralist Approach 65

Nonreductive Intertheoretic Relations and Unity of Nature 71

Intermediate Conclusion 76

3. Representations 80

Current Defining Lines of the Monism versus Pluralism Debate 81

Simulations of Real-World Physical Systems: A Case of Permanent Incompatible Plurality 93

Taxonomic Pluralism 110

Concluding Remarks 132

Notes 137

References 161

Index 174